WHAT TO EXPECT AT A CLINIC

What will be covered at the clinic?

Because all clinics are filled with different horses & riders of varying experience and knowledge, each clinic is different. They all bring horses with varying degrees of “problems” or things they perceive as problems and therefore it depends on this when we are asked to give exact details of what will be covered in each clinic.

What will be consistent at each clinic is that you will get a demonstration of a thought process that all successful horse people use when working with their horses. Warwick will use each rider and horse combination as another way to demonstrate how the thought process can be applied successfully while working through any problems or steps in the process.

This is very beneficial to spectators, because once you understand the thought process, you will be able to apply it to your own horse and situation and then the possibilities are endless.

What can I expect from the clinic?

Here is what you can expect at the clinics (intermediate clinics are slightly different in that there will be no groundwork done and the first day progresses faster without all of the stories – do not read this to mean there won't be any stories :).

The first morning we start at 8AM with everyone present for a "classroom" type of session. This sets the stage for the rest of the clinic. There will be a total of 4 groups of 3 riders/handlers. Warwick is passionate about everyone leaving the clinic knowing more about the Principles of Training. Once you understand the principles, you can make up your own methods and address problems in real time with your horse.

Every 2 hours (or so), there will be new groups of riders/handlers and depending on the skill level, they may start with groundwork and quickly proceed to riding, they may work on groundwork or a combination of both.

On the second day, the goal is to have everyone riding and progressing through the steps of the process. This is usually the day when everyone has epiphanies and Warwick links everything together from the first day. It is here that we see the progress and celebrate in the changes.

What are the start and finish times?

Start time – 1st day: 8:00 AM

Finish time – 1st day: whenever everyone has had attention, usually 6, sometimes later

Start time – 2nd day: 8:00 AM

Finish time – 2nd day: whenever everyone has had attention, usually earlier than first day, but sometimes later

About the Riders: Unless otherwise noted, riders are all current online video subscription subscribers and are at various stages of working with their horse through the process. The clinic is designed to give subscribers feedback on how they are progressing through the process and help them with any spots that they need help with. The riders have been briefed through a longer document that is available for anyone to read on the clinics page of the website. They also get weekly emails with tips and videos to review and practice.

Spectator/Fencesitter Expectations: You are a guest, albeit a paying guest to witness what is happening in the arena. Without the riders, this clinic would not be happening. Please show them the respect, good thoughts and collaboration that you would want if you were in the arena. Remember, they all signed up to receive help – this means that they are not perfect yet – they are a work in progress (like all human beings). Please refrain from negative discussions with your friends about what is happening in the arena.

We have slightly changed the format of clinics to cut down on the amount of stories that Warwick tells, so it may feel like you are missing an inside joke at times if you don't subscribe yourself. This is not on purpose, but there are over 850 videos (many weeks worth of time to watch if you did it all day, every day), which cover a lot of the stories and analogies and Warwick's training process in detail. As we mentioned above, most clinics are filled with riders who have been subscribing for at least 6 months and they have heard these stories before.

OTHER INFORMATION:

- Usually food and drinks are not available at the venue, it is best to plan on this situation being true.
- Please bring your own chair, even if there are grandstands/bleachers, your chair will be more comfortable.
- No videoing please. Photos are fine but the photos belong to WSPH – this includes professional photographers. You may not use pictures without our consent.
- Usually you can just show up and pay on the day. Some venues have restrictions and if so, there will be a pre-registration process. Entrance is $40 per day in local currency.
- Merchandise is not usually available due to luggage restrictions.
- While you will likely meet some awesome people at these clinics, remember that the mission of the clinic is education. Please don't disrupt others with talking, alcohol or drug abuse, or unrestrained children.
- If you don't like a lot of talking/story telling/ examples, this is probably not the clinic for you.
- If you are coming to be entertained and watch a lot of action, this is probably not the clinic for you. Warwick is an educator and if you come with the desire to learn more about how you can help your horse learn, then you will be happy with this clinic.
- What you will find with Warwick is there will be no frills, not a lot of excitement, no secret methods, nothing patented, nor a big sales pitch. What you will get is a straight forward, very thoroughly explained, down to earth, educational couple of days.

Expectations of Everyone in attendance: If you have been around the Facebook group or watched any videos, you will notice the positive vibe in everything that Warwick does. He truly wants to help the riders in the clinics and he wants to help the people watching as well. He is very passionate about teaching every horse owner the Principles of horse training and doesn't want to miss any teaching opportunities. This positive "vibe" is not an act, it is not something that he does for show or is faked in any way. So, let us be very clear: negativity at the clinics will not be tolerated. It is simply uncalled for at any time, in any situation at a Warwick Schiller clinic. From the minute you step onto the venue, it is assumed that you want to learn as much as the person sitting next to you and some of the people sitting next to you are actual riders in the clinic. Without the riders, nobody at the clinic can learn. I will sum this portion up in one sentence, "If you can't celebrate someone's courage for asking for help, please don't attend or please leave." If you feel like someone at the clinic is spreading negativity, please use this phrase with our blessing. And if they don't leave, then please relocate yourself so that you can enjoy the rest of the clinic.

Please also remember that even though you may see super human like qualities, Warwick lacks eyes in the back of his head and he doesn't read minds. In other words, he's human too and will make mistakes and miss opportunities. He is a work in progress too (but we are searching for a little mirror he can clip to his hat.)

Questions or concerns?

We realize that some people will have unique questions or concerns and we try to address these as best we can. If you have a special request or need, please contact Robyn by email at clinics@warwickschiller.com well BEFORE the clinic dates to see if we can assist you.

CLINIC FAQs

Q: What do I have to do to be able to attend a clinic?

A: For the basic clinic:

You should have mastered the work on the standing still and present playlist/flowchart and be up to the collision avoidance exercises. These should be good both at home and away from home (or you will work on this at the clinic). If riding, need to have mastered the first rides both at home and away from home.

if you have not accomplished this by the time you register for the clinic, please list your plan to accomplish this before the clinic and know you might work on only this.

Q: Do I really need to have taken my horse away from home before attending a clinic and perfect the exercises there?

A: Yes.

One of the principles of training is “Change 1 Thing at a Time” and taking a horse to a new place (1 change) with a lot of other horses (2 changes) while the handler is nervous about being in front of Warwick and a crowd (3 changes) is too many changes to be fair to your horse. If this part is not good, you may only work on this at the clinic.

Q: If riding, do I really need to be able to do the bending for relaxation and have solved destination addiction, at the walk and the trot, at home and away from home, before the clinic?

A: Yes.

One of the principles of training is Change 1 Thing at a Time. By doing this work at home first, then perfecting it away from home, your horse will be prepared to work on furthering their education at the clinic. If this part is not good, then you may only work on this at the clinic.

Q: Why the new rules for what a horse needs to be able to do?

A: Time

In the past, Warwick has spent most of his time at clinics working on the very first thing. This takes quite a bit of time and many times this is all that gets accomplished at the clinic. These new requirements are to help everyone get the most benefit out of both the subscription and the clinic. This includes other participants who came prepared but get held back because others in their group have not worked on the basics.

Q: How are the groups structured?

A: 4 Groups of 3

Only 12 participants are allowed in each clinic. Participants are divided into 4 groups of 3 and go for 2 hours each.
